Officers and Trustees of The UCSB Foundation 24
We are proud to report that UC Santa Barbara’s first comprehensive campaign thus far has generated more than $351-million toward a goal of $500-million for priority projects and initiatives to ensure UCSB’s excellence for future generations. • Of that total, UCSB received $55.3-million in gifts and pledges from alumni, parents, faculty, and friends during the 2005-06 fiscal year for research and instruction, scholarships and fellowships, innovative programs, and new facilities. Philanthropic support in the form of cash for new gifts and pledges accounted for $52.3-million of the amount received, the second highest cash total in campus history. • Since the inception of The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara in 2000, UCSB’s endowment—now estimated at $155-million—has nearly doubled. A total of 35 new endowed chairs have been established during the campaign, bringing UCSB’s total to 60. Included in that figure are five new endowed professorships created during 2005-06 by UCSB alumni volunteer leaders and an anonymous benefactor to help build and support the university’s distinguished faculty. • This year’s progress toward the campaign goal was highlighted by some remarkable donations. UC Santa Barbara received a record $4.6-million to enhance opportunities for our most talented and deserving students. Other major gifts included a $5-million research grant to develop and implement sustainable fisheries management practices in fishing communities; $3.5-million to launch a dynamic new interdisciplinary research center for the study of the mind; and $2.35-million to expand UCSB’s facilities and services for children with autism and their families. • The entire UC Santa Barbara community joins us in acknowledging, thanking, and celebrating the record number of UCSB Foundation Trustees, faculty, alumni, parents, and friends honored in this report of private giving. We are grateful for your partnership and commitment to creating an extraordinary future for UC Santa Barbara.

Philanthropy at Work

UCSB is proud to recognize the record number of alumni and friends, as well as corporations, organizations, and foundations, who made generous contributions to The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara in the year ending June 30, 2006. To all of our supporters, especially those listed in the Honor Roll of Donors that begins on page 14, UCSB expresses its sincere gratitude and profound appreciation. On the pages that follow are just a few examples of the ways in which UC Santa Barbara’s many benefactors are helping to support innovation in teaching and research across the academic disciplines.
Judith H. Stapelmann, who earned both undergraduate and graduate degrees in biology from UC Santa Barbara, has made a $4.9-million gift to the campus in a charitable remainder trust. The planned gift eventually will fund an unrestricted endowment for the Department of Ecology, Evolution, and Marine Biology and provide operating support for the Sedgwick Reserve.

UCSB's Department of Ecology, Evolution, and Marine Biology (EEMB) has been rated in the top 10 departments nationally for its overall research impact. It is comprised of 35 faculty research groups that use their scientific understanding to address some of the world's most pressing environmental issues. More than 1,600 undergraduates and 100 graduate students are enrolled in courses in the biological sciences at UC Santa Barbara.

Situated in the Santa Ynez Valley of Santa Barbara County, the Sedgwick Reserve is part of the University of California's Natural Reserve System, which preserves and maintains significant examples of California's diverse aquatic and terrestrial ecosystems for teaching, research, and public service. UCSB oversees seven such sites, including the Sedgwick Reserve.

Alumni and other friends of the campus are helping to set a strong pace for The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara by making planned gifts to the university. A total of $14.9-million in planned gifts was received during 2005-06, higher than any other previous year. Through effective gift planning, donors can balance their personal financial goals with their charitable interests, and realize significant tax benefits.
Distinguished professorships form an academic tradition of excellence that dates back to Renaissance England. Created by philanthropic gifts, endowed chairs honor a professor’s outstanding contributions to a discipline and provide permanent financial support to advance teaching and research in a carefully chosen subject. These coveted awards have been invaluable tools for fostering the distinction of UCSB’s faculty.

Endowed professorships make it possible for the university to offer incentives to retain gifted professors and to attract new ones. They are also one of the highest forms of campus recognition that a faculty member can receive.

During the 2005-06 academic year, five endowed professorships were established by UCSB alumni volunteer leaders and an anonymous benefactor to help build and support the university’s outstanding faculty. A total of 35 new endowed chairs have been established during The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara, bringing UCSB’s total to 60.

Two endowed chairs were established in computer science by Karl and Pamela Lopker and UCSB Foundation Trustee Mark Bertelsen, and his wife, Susan, all UCSB graduates. Robert Duggan, also a foundation trustee and an alumnus, made a gift to fund an endowed professorship in organic chemistry with his wife, Patricia. Foundation Trustee Gary Wilcox and his wife, Sue, also alumni, established a faculty chair in biotechnology. The endowment gift from an anonymous donor will fund a professorship in demography in the social sciences.

Ann Taves, an internationally recognized historian of Christianity and of American religion, was recruited by UCSB’s Religious Studies Department as the first professor appointed to the Cordano Chair in Catholic Studies. Endowed chairs allow a university to develop a field of study more fully, and support the activities of a top scholar.
The Mitsubishi Chemical Corporation of Tokyo and UC Santa Barbara have extended their successful research and education alliance for a new term of four years.

With the support of Mitsubishi Chemical—Japan’s largest chemical company—UCSB, in 2001, formed a highly productive research unit called the Mitsubishi Chemical Center for Advanced Materials (MC-CAM), which is directed by Professor Glenn Fredrickson. In a very short time, the center established itself as an engine of innovation, responsible for a large number of research publications, new patents, and inventions. It is in recognition of this superb record of scientific achievement, as well as the mutual benefits generated by this partnership, that the campus and the company have agreed to extend and enhance their relationship.

Under the terms of the new agreement, Mitsubishi Chemical will invest between $8.5-million and $10-million at UCSB over the next four years. The funds will support research as well as the administration of the MC-CAM center. The total also includes a philanthropic contribution of $800,000 to permanently endow new graduate fellowships in materials and chemical engineering.

The center’s researchers are involved in creating exciting new materials, devices, and advanced fabrication technologies for the specialty chemical and electronic materials marketplace.

Ryuichi Tomizawa, president and chief executive officer of Mitsubishi Chemical, said his company has been gratified by how quickly its investment in the materials center has led to an impressive number of technology options and licenses. “This is a partnership that makes good sense for science and for business,” he said. “We are confident that the next four years will yield even more opportunities for the university and our company.”

Fueling an Engine of Innovation

Nalini Gupta, a graduate student in materials engineering, was one of several outstanding students awarded prestigious Mitsubishi fellowships last year. She is primarily interested in polymeric materials chemistry and is working toward a doctorate in biomaterials.
Creating Sustainable Fisheries

The Paul G. Allen Family Foundation has awarded a $5-million grant to UCSB’s Donald Bren School of Environmental Science and Management, the Marine Science Institute, and the National Center for Ecological Analysis and Synthesis to support research leading to the development and implementation of sustainable fisheries management practices in fishing communities. UCSB will be working in partnership with Environmental Defense, a national nonprofit organization dedicated to creating innovative solutions to urgent environmental problems.

The purpose of the grant is to incorporate new mechanisms in fishery management that will align the economic incentives of fishermen with the implementation of conservation tools to improve ocean stewardship.

Scientists, regulators, and fishermen recognize that change is required to stop the overall decline of ocean ecosystems. The challenge lies in overcoming deep concerns about the short-term economic impacts of such a change, and a debilitating lack of public funding for monitoring, enforcement, and transition costs associated with transforming fisheries into sustainable enterprises that would allow ecosystems to rebound. As a result, management reform has been unable to keep up with the pace of fishing.

The goal of the project is to partner with fishing communities, regulators, and other stakeholders to develop and test management, marketing, and financing approaches that bridge the gap between current financial needs and future economic gains.

Through various philanthropic, research and development, and educational initiatives, the Paul G. Allen Family Foundation supports a range of science, technology, and environmental initiatives that seek to improve the environment, enhance the understanding of ecology, and enrich the quality of people’s lives.
Expanding Services for Children with Autism

The Koegel Autism Research and Training Center at UC Santa Barbara’s Gevirtz Graduate School of Education has received a $2.35-million gift from Brian and Patricia Kelly that will provide enhanced facilities for what is widely recognized as one of the nation’s leading centers for the diagnosis, evaluation, and treatment of autism.

The Kelly gift will help create a new physical home for the Koegel Autism Research and Training Center and make it possible for the center to expand its services for children with autism and their families. The new facility, which will be part of a new, state-funded Social Sciences and Education Building complex on campus, will more than double the center’s existing clinical space.

UCSB’s Koegel Autism Research and Training Center is dedicated to improving the lives and prognoses of children with autism, as well as the lives of their families. It has been recognized by the National Academy of Sciences—and ranked among the country’s top 12 such facilities—for its innovative research and teaching methods in a variety of areas, including parent education, language development, and teacher education.

The Koegel Center offers a state-of-the-art behavioral approach to autistic children.

“Through our support for this outstanding center, we hope to raise public awareness of autism and help generate additional support to facilitate effective treatment and research on autism,” said Brian Kelly. “UCSB’s Autism Research Center is one of the best centers in the country.”
SAGE Publications has contributed $3.5-million to launch a dynamic new interdisciplinary research center for the study of the mind at UC Santa Barbara. SAGE made the gift to commemorate its 40th anniversary as a leading international publisher for scholarly, educational, and professional markets.

The SAGE Center for the Study of the Mind will bring together UCSB scholars from a broad range of academic disciplines in the arts and humanities, social sciences, the sciences, and engineering to explore the multidimensional nature of the human mind.

UCSB has attracted a top scholar to lead the pioneering new effort. Michael Gazzaniga, widely regarded as the founder of the cognitive neuroscience field, was recruited from Dartmouth to direct the SAGE Center. He has joined UCSB’s Psychology Department, where he began his academic career in 1967 as an assistant professor of psychology. Gazzaniga was recently elected a member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academies.

“This is a fantastic opportunity to return to the place where I started my career and to build the mind sciences into a wide-ranging program that is inclusive of the social sciences and the arts and humanities,” said Gazzaniga. “It is an opportunity to pull together those people on campus who are interested in interdisciplinary work, which is rare at other universities. My hope is to build a powerful new center focused on the unique nature of the human mind and how it works.”

Michael Gazzaniga, the new director of UCSB’s SAGE Center for the Study of the Mind, has had a distinguished teaching and mentoring career that has included beginning and developing centers for cognitive neuroscience at UC Davis and at Dartmouth, and founding the Journal of Cognitive Neuroscience, of which he is the editor-in-chief.
Recognizing Distinction

Private gifts are increasingly important in maintaining the quality of UC's three missions of teaching, research, and public service. Among the principal forms of private support are endowed chairs, which support the educational and research activities of distinguished members of the faculty.

The following generous benefactors have made permanent investments in UC Santa Barbara’s future by establishing endowed chairs.

Honor Roll of Donors
UC Santa Barbara is grateful for the extraordinary support of members of the Platinum, Gold, and Sapphire Circles. The preeminent scholarship, instruction, and public service that define UC Santa Barbara have helped shape its identity as a place of exceptional possibility. The university's accomplishments are strengthened immeasurably by these philanthropic gifts. Over time, the generosity of these alumni, parents, friends, trustees of The UCSB Foundation, and corporations has ensured the continued strength of UC Santa Barbara.

Lancaster Society
It is with sincere gratitude that UC Santa Barbara recognizes our alumni, parents, friends, trustees of The UCSB Foundation, corporations, and foundations who have contributed $100,000 to $999,999 to the university over time. Through their commitment and leadership, these distinguished members of the Lancaster Society have helped build the university's reputation for teaching, research, and public service. The Society is named for Louis and Winifred Lancaster, civic-minded philanthropists deeply committed to the public partnership that is the heart of UC Santa Barbara. During their lifetimes, they helped establish The UCSB Foundation and worked tirelessly to build meaningful bridges between the university and the larger community. Their vision is sustained through the loyal generosity of today's members of the Lancaster Society, celebrated for their contributions to an enduring foundation for excellence at UC Santa Barbara.

Legacy Circle
The Legacy Circle honors alumni, friends, faculty, and staff who have included UC Santa Barbara in their estate plans through some form of planned gift. Membership in the society is conferred upon those who have communicated to the university their intention to make a gift through a bequest, charitable trust, charitable gift annuity, pooled income funds, life insurance, retirement fund, or a gift of property with a retained life estate. The following generous donors are providing the legacy of support with which UC Santa Barbara will continue to grow and excel.

Thomas More Storke Associates
The Thomas More Storke Associates honors alumni and friends who make annual leadership gifts of $10,000 and above to UC Santa Barbara. The gift recognition society is named for the late Thomas More Storke, a campus visionary and benefactor. Storke was a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and former UC Regent, who in 1944 played a key role in persuading the Legislature to designate Santa Barbara State College, UCSB’s progenitor, a campus of the University of California. The Storke family legacy includes the complex of buildings and public spaces that form the center of student life at UCSB and two endowed chairs. Thomas Storke joined with his children to help fund construction of a University Center. Later, he made an even more dramatic gift to build what by tradition is called Storke Plaza with the campus’s identifying symbol, the bell tower, which also houses student publications. His generous gifts and those of his family have helped shape UC Santa Barbara.

The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara

Alumni and friends of the campus who are included in this report are helping to set a strong pace for The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara, the first comprehensive campaign to raise private funds to ensure UCSB’s excellence for future generations. The goal is to raise $500-million, and already UC Santa Barbara has received more than $351-million for priority projects and initiatives. Following are the over-arching objectives for The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara.

Premier facilities equal to the growing reputation of one of the world’s leading universities. UCSB is committed to providing its faculty, staff, and students with the best possible facilities to support our teaching, research, and public service missions. Increasing the quality and quantity of our buildings and upgrading our physical environment is essential if the appearance of our campus is to appropriately reflect and complement its academic stature and culture. As Chancellor Yang has put it, “A world-class university must have a physical presence to match.”

Recruitment and retention of preeminent professors. During the campaign, our generous supporters have helped establish 35 new endowed chairs, bringing to 60 the total number of such distinguished professorships on our campus.

Enhanced opportunities for our most talented and deserving students, including more private support for fellowships and scholarships. In 2005-06 alone, a record $4.9-million in student support was raised.

New programs in pioneering areas of cross-disciplinary inquiry, such as the SAGE Center for the Study of the Mind and the Carsey-Wolf Center for Film, Television, and New Media.

More research initiatives leading to discoveries and solutions that improve the environment, enhance the quality of life, and contribute to personal health and well-being.

Increased support for innovative teaching. With undergraduates accounting for more than 85 percent of UC Santa Barbara’s students, top-quality classroom instruction is critical. Providing faculty members with support and tools they can use to engage their students is a key component of UCSB’s educational excellence.
