Ensuring Excellence

UC Santa Barbara’s accomplishments are enhanced immeasurably by philanthropic gifts, and we are sincerely grateful to our devoted alumni, parents, faculty, staff, and friends for their steadfast generosity and inspirational commitment to the future excellence of the campus, especially in these challenging times. The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara continues to attract strong private support for the campus, thus far generating a total of $544 million for priority initiatives. Of that total, more than $40 million was raised in 2008-09 for student scholarships, research, and academic programs. Although contributions were down sharply from the previous record year, funds raised exceeded earlier projections due to a remarkable increase in the number of gifts received. Since the campaign was launched in 2000, we are proud to report that 57 endowed professorships have been established to enhance teaching and research and 139 fellowships were created to attract outstanding students. Campus facilities greatly enhanced by private support include the new Education, Social Sciences, and Media Studies Complex of three buildings on the west side of the campus. California was hit particularly hard by the economic downturn, resulting in huge budget reductions for the University of California and its campuses. Planning is now under way at UC Santa Barbara to identity priorities for the next phase of our campaign that will help protect and build on what we have already achieved. Please accept our heartfelt appreciation for your extraordinary support. Your partnership will continue to play a pivotal role in enabling our campus to respond to fiscal challenges in ways that do not compromise our commitment to quality, innovation, access, and excellence.

Philanthropy at Work

UC Santa Barbara is proud to recognize the growing number of alumni, parents, and friends, as well as corporations, foundations, and organizations, who made generous contributions to The Campaign for UC Santa Barbara in the year ending June 30, 2009. Their philanthropic gifts will enhance teaching and research, strengthen existing areas of excellence, and make it possible to develop new, innovative academic programs.

To all of our supporters, especially those listed in the Honor Roll of Donors that begins on page 14, UCSB expresses its sincere gratitude and profound appreciation. On the pages that follow are just a few examples of the ways in which the generosity of UC Santa Barbara’s benefactors supports academic excellence and creates new opportunities for learning and discovery.

The campus skyline has changed with the addition of new buildings.
The Institute for Energy Efficiency in the College of Engineering has received a $500,000 gift from George W. Holbrook Jr. to support the development of energy efficient technologies, including more efficient electronics, computers, buildings, lighting, and photovoltaics. The pioneering interdisciplinary institute brings together 50 campus researchers with related expertise to develop energy-saving technologies in lighting, computing, building, manufacturing, and transportation. Holbrook serves on the institute’s Director’s Council.

The institute was recently awarded $19 million in federal economic stimulus funds to launch a new Center for Energy Efficient Materials. The center is one of 46 Energy Frontier Research Centers established by the Department of Energy to address the nation’s critical energy challenges. UCSB is leading the center, which also involves researchers from UC Santa Cruz, Harvard University, the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, and Los Alamos National Laboratory.

The goal of the center is to discover and develop novel materials that control the interactions between light, electricity, and heat at the nanoscale for improved solar energy conversion, solid-state lighting, and conversion of heat into electricity.

Developing New Energy Solutions

The electronic structure of the surface of Gallium Nitride, which is used as an enabling material in a new generation of high-efficiency solar materials, is pictured above.

John Bowers, director of the Institute for Energy Efficiency, is leading UCSB’s efforts to develop new energy efficient technologies.

Enhancing Public Programming

Emmy Award-winning television producer Marcy Carsey has made a new $1 million gift to the campus to expand her support for the Carsey-Wolf Center for Film, Television, and New Media. The contribution from her family foundation will enhance public programming at the center’s Pollock Theater.

The 298-seat theater, which is nearing completion, will be a state-of-the-art media exhibition hall with production facilities that will be used as a classroom and public theater.

The interdisciplinary educational and research center is named for Carsey and fellow Emmy Award-winning producer Dick Wolf. Both made generous contributions to UC Santa Barbara to establish a permanent home for the privately funded center in the campus’s new Social Sciences and Media Studies Building.

An additional $5 million in private support is being sought for the Carsey-Wolf Center for physical enhancements, new equipment, programming, and to establish an endowment that will provide ongoing support for students, teaching, and research.

Carsey is a trustee of the UC Santa Barbara Foundation and an honorary alumna of the campus. She also serves as co-chair of the center’s advisory board.
The Hellman Foundation, led by Warren and Chris Hellman, has made a $1 million gift to renew and expand its support of research by promising assistant professors across the disciplines “who show capacity for great distinction.” The Hellman Fellows program was established in 2008 with a $250,000 gift from the foundation.

Nine UC Santa Barbara assistant professors were awarded Hellman Fellowships in 2009 to support their research on a range of subjects, including autism, American music icon Charles Ives, entertainment empires, plant and animal species extinction, improving the health of college students, and the early identification of and intervention with “at risk” students. The prestigious awards are designed to assist junior faculty early in their careers before first grants are obtained. The maximum Hellman Fellowship award is $50,000, and must be used before consideration for tenure.

Recipients are: Paul Atzberger, Mathematics; Philip Babcock, Economics; Bradley Cardinale, Ecology, Evolution, and Marine Biology; Erin Dowdy, Counseling, Clinical, and School Psychology; Jennifer Holt, Film and Media Studies; Skirmantas Janusonis, Psychology; Marek Kapicka, Economics; David Paul, Music; and Matthew Quirk, Counseling, Clinical, and School Psychology.

Supporting the Promise of Distinction

Hellman Fellow Erin Dowdy, assistant professor of counseling, clinical, and school psychology, is conducting research on the early identification of emotional and behavioral problems in schools. She demonstrates the use of a “smartboard” in the new Education Building.
A planned global telescope network has established a new observatory in UC Santa Barbara’s Sedgwick Reserve in the Santa Ynez Valley. The 32-inch telescope will create a “gateway to science” for K-12 students and extraordinary research opportunities for UC Santa Barbara astrophysicists and students.

The observatory is part of the Las Cumbres Observatory Global Telescope Network that, when complete, will link telescopes around the world, creating an uninterrupted, 24-hour-a-day view of the night sky. The network’s programmable telescopes are equipped for imaging in different colors, and all their data will be remotely accessible via the Internet.

The Sedgwick observatory is named in memory of Laurie Nelle Byrne, who served as a docent at the reserve, and in honor of the Byrne family. Over the years, the family’s foundation has supported infrastructure improvements at the 5,900-acre expanse of fields, canyons, and woodlands that are preserved for teaching and research as part of the University of California’s Natural Reserve System. UC Santa Barbara physicists are engaged in docent training at the Byrne Observatory.

The new Byrne Observatory at the Sedgwick Reserve is part of a planned global telescope network that will provide extraordinary research opportunities for UCSB astrophysicists and students and educational opportunities for K-12 students.
UC Santa Barbara has received a $1 million gift from alumnus John Gurley and his wife, Meg, to establish an endowed chair in theoretical physics and biology at the Kavli Institute for Theoretical Physics (KITP). The Susan F. Gurley Chair, which is named in memory of Gurley’s mother, has been awarded to Boris Shraiman, a permanent member of the institute.

Shraiman joined the campus faculty in 2004. With broad research interests in theoretical physics and biology, he has made significant contributions in a number of fields ranging from correlated electron systems to pattern formation and turbulence. His current research uses physics ideas and approaches to study biological systems.

John Gurley, a successful entrepreneur, earned a bachelor’s degree in physics and a master’s degree in scientific instrumentation at UC Santa Barbara. He serves as a member of the Directors Council at the Kavli Institute. For his pivotal role in helping to establish the new field of theoretical biology, Gurley has been named a Senior Fellow of the KITP.

Additional endowed chairs established in 2008-09 were the Glen and Susanne Culler Chair in Computer Science and the Doluca Family Chair in Electrical and Computer Engineering.

Boris Shraiman is the first recipient of the Susan F. Gurley Chair in Theoretical Physics and Biology at the Kavli Institute for Theoretical Physics, which brings together renowned international theoretical physicists to advance research in the field.
Song-I Han, assistant professor of chemistry and biochemistry, is one of 20 “most promising science and engineering researchers at U.S. universities” to receive a Packard Foundation Fellowship for Science and Engineering, which will support her research in developing new magnetic resonance methods with enhanced imaging capability.

Advancing Scientific Discovery

Song-I Han, a distinguished assistant professor in UCSB’s Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry, has been awarded a prestigious David and Lucile Packard Foundation Fellowship for Science and Engineering that will provide $875,000 in research funding over five years. Han was one of 20 “most promising science and engineering researchers at U.S. universities” to be so honored.

The Packard award will support her research in developing new magnetic resonance methods with enhanced sensitivity and imaging capability. In addition to developing state-of-the-art biophysical instrumentation, her research addresses questions such as what drives Alzheimer’s-related proteins to aggregate as brain deposits, and how proteins fuel marine bacteria using sunlight.

The Packard Fellowship program is among the nation’s largest nongovernmental programs to provide funding for unusually creative researchers early in their careers to pursue innovative solutions to major scientific challenges.

Han received her doctoral degree in natural sciences from the Aachen University of Technology in Germany. Prior to joining the UC Santa Barbara faculty in 2004, she pursued postdoctoral studies at the Max-Planck Institute for Polymer Research and at UC Berkeley.

Her previous honors include the Camille and Henry Dreyfus New Faculty Award and the National Science Foundation Faculty Early Career Development Award.
Recognizing Distinction

Private gifts are increasingly important in maintaining the quality of UC Santa Barbara’s mission of teaching, research, and public service. Among the principal forms of private support are endowed chairs, which support the educational and research activities of distinguished members of the faculty.

The following generous benefactors have made permanent investments in UC Santa Barbara’s future by establishing endowed chairs.

Lancaster Society

UC Santa Barbara is grateful for the extraordinary support of our alumni, parents, friends, trustees of the UC Santa Barbara Foundation, corporations, and foundations who have contributed $100,000 or more to the university over time. Through their commitment and leadership, these distinguished members of the Lancaster Society have helped build the university’s reputation for teaching, research, and public service. The Society is named for Louis and Winifred Lancaster, civic-minded philanthropists deeply committed to the public partnership that is at the heart of UC Santa Barbara. During their lifetimes, they helped establish the UC Santa Barbara Foundation and worked tirelessly to build meaningful bridges between the university and the larger community. Their vision is sustained through the loyal generosity of today’s members of the Lancaster Society, celebrated for their contributions to an enduring foundation for excellence at UC Santa Barbara.

Legacy Circle
The Legacy Circle honors alumni, friends, faculty, and staff who have included UC Santa Barbara in their estate plans through some form of planned gift. Membership in the society is conferred upon those who have communicated to the university their intention to make a gift through a bequest, charitable trust, charitable gift annuity, pooled income funds, life insurance, retirement fund, or a gift of property with a retained life estate. The following generous donors are providing the legacy of support with which UC Santa Barbara will continue to grow and excel.

Chancellor’s Council

The Chancellor’s Council was established in 1975 by a core group of donors who believed that ongoing annual support was essential to building and maintaining excellence at UC Santa Barbara. Since that time, it has grown into the university’s premier annual giving program, recognizing donors of $1,000 or more. These gifts may be unrestricted, for use where the need is greatest, or restricted to support a specific department or program. UC Santa Barbara honors and celebrates alumni, friends, parents, and trustees of the UC Santa Barbara Foundation for their ongoing partnership and commitment to the future of this great university.
